

Dan,

Thank you for the CCW class I attended at Pro Armament on January 31st 2015.

Your class was non-stop learning. It is clear that your skill, knowledge base and presentation ability is unparalleled. I have some friends in law enforcement and it was important to me to take my CCW class from an individual with a distinguished law enforcement background and not with someone who has taken a 12 hour training course (which is fine if that is what an individual is looking for). Choosing a CCW class is an extremely important decision. I have friends who have bragged about paying $40. It makes me shudder! The dynamics of your class were such that the fee is absolutely negligible. It's the best value I've received for my money in my lifetime. I would encourage anyone choosing a CCW class to ask themselves the following questions:

Isn't this one of the most important decisions in my life?

Don't I want the very best instructor money can buy?

Is it important to take the class from someone with a distinguished law enforcement career that can share their expansive experiences & knowledge base?

If people answer "no" to any of these questions, that's OK. They are not a Dan Clevenger student!

Thanks again!
